2017 Future of Wealth Summit Will Tackle Technology, Inclusion and Social Change

Big Data, Inclusion, FinTech, and the Future of Work Among Topics

(WASHINGTON, D.C.) – “The 2017 Future of Wealth Summit: Technology, Inclusion and Social Change” will be hosted by the Center for Global Policy Solutions on April 26-28, 2017. Featuring a diverse array of experts, the event will discuss how technology can foster enhanced convenient access to critical information and services without reinforcing bias, narrowing choices, and undermining privacy.

Jesse Williams, actor, activist and co-founder of the startup mobile app Ebroji, will be the reception keynote speaker on April 26. The Summit will also feature the “Inclusion Revolution Innovation Competition”, which will award a $10,000 prize to an innovator who proposes the best product, service, program, or policy to help make the application of technology, big data, and/or the operation of the tech sector more inclusive and socio-economically beneficial to marginalized communities.

WHAT: The 2017 Future of Wealth Summit: Technology, Inclusion and Social Change

ABOUT THE SUMMIT

What is The 2017 Future of Wealth Summit?

The Future of Wealth Summit, hosted by the Center for Global Policy Solutions, convenes leaders in government, business, philanthropy, academia, journalism, and advocacy to explore structural barriers to opportunity in the United States. These dialogues will advance solutions that encourage a more inclusive, equitable, and prosperous society for all.

Technology, Inclusion and Social Change

This year's Summit examines the future of wealth through the lens of "Technology, Inclusion, and Social Change." It will bring together experts at the intersection of civic engagement, education, financial services, health, human and civil rights, and technology to discuss and drive equity-centered solutions to society's biggest challenges.

Summit participants will learn about the impact of the latest technological advancements in big data, machine learning, and artificial intelligence. Discussions will center on how applications can foster convenient access to critical information and services without encouraging uses that reinforce biases, narrow choices, and undermine privacy.

The 2017 Future of Wealth Summit will help shape the national agenda by educating policymakers, business leaders, and the public about strategies to promote consumer-friendly, unbiased innovation and ways to leverage big data for social good.

What is the Center for Global Policy Solutions?
